ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Intellectual Property Rights (IPR) are essential in today's knowledge-driven world as they protect the creative and innovative works of individuals across all disciplines. Whether in science, technology, commerce, or the arts, IPR ensures that inventors, writers, researchers, and artists receive due credit and benefit from their creations. It promotes innovation, creativity, and fair competition, serving as a bridge between knowledge and its practical application in modern subjects such as Information Technology, Economics, Literature, and Fine Arts.

In the present era, where ideas and creativity hold immense value, understanding IPR has become crucial for students and professionals in every field. It safeguards originality, encourages research, and inspires individuals to develop new concepts responsibly. This seminar aims to create awareness about the importance of Intellectual Property Rights in protecting creativity and innovation, thereby fostering respect for intellectual contributions across all branches of learning.
